From the Bischof Style Show

Suits that Give New Figure Lines

In the new silhouette, the most striking note is the tapering effect—the width just below the hips and the narrowing down about the feet.

Skirts are longer this season—as long as they can comfortably be worn—and must be draped close to follow the lines of the figure. Many of the most elegant new costumes show drapery at the front, but the skirt that is draped at the side vies for favor. Much of this new drapery flows down from the waistline, swelling somewhat below the hips; again it is introduced in plaits or gathers at the belt with the folds swinging off to right or left or caught in at the sides—styles which maintain the indispensable narrow effect about the ankles.

To be really in the height of the mode, the skirt must be slashed. The slash, as Bischof uses it, is generally the unstitched end of a deep lapped seam and is designed only to relieve the narrowness of the new skirt.

The coats, too, show the tapering effect. The important part the cutaway plays is seen everywhere in connection with the elongated panache back.

The sleeves also accentuate the long, sloping shoulder lines, most of them being of the Mandarin type set low on the arm. As these sleeves are long and fit the forearm closely, they are set into a large, pear-shaped armhole. In every Bischof garment a tiny gusset under the arm insures comfort, freedom and good service.

Come in and see how cleverly Bischof uses every one of these new style features.

You will find a wealth of suggestions—for he has thought out all your needs for Fall and Winter in garments that combine the most fashionable effects with moderate price. Come in and see this interesting collection now: make your selection before the choicest models are taken.

STEVENS-WILSON CO.

MAY RENEW PARLEY WITH HUERTA

Washington, Sept. 18.—President Wilson let it be known today that he takes the view that there was nothing in Gen. Huerta's message to congress last Monday in any way inconsistent with the interpretation adopted by the United States of the last note transmitted by Frederico Gamboa, Mexican Minister of Foreign Relations to John Lind, the American Envoy.

The Administration considers that Huerta, having been declared in the Gamboa note ineligible to succeed him self as Provisional president, will not be a candidate in the approaching elections and the American government had been met by the new county advocate through Mr. Lind on this basis. Mr. Lind has been given the views of the Administration in telegrams sent to him by Secretary Bryan during the last twenty-four hours, but has no instructions to take further steps unless the Huerta officials are prepared specifically to accept the American interpretation of the last Gamboa note.

No announcement was forthcoming today as to the policy to be pursued with respect to the presence of American warships in Mexican waters, but the official view here is that there will be no friction on the point when the authorization for their stay off the Mexican coast expires next month. A satisfactory understanding is expected to be reached through diplomatic channels, as on previous occasions, when warships have been sent to protect American interests.

Official reports of the killing of the Americans, W. O. Robertson and Morris P. Root, were received at the state department today. A dispatch from Guadalajara said Root was killed by a Mexican miner during a quarrel on Sept. 2. No details of Mr. Robertson's death at the hands of rebels at El Lobo, Sinaloa, Sept. 11, were given.

CURRENCY BILL PASSED

DEMOCRATIC MEASURE PASSES
HOUSE BY VOTE OF 286 TO 84.
SENATE NEXT.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The administration currency bill was passed today by the house by a vote of 286 to 84, practically unamended in its essential provisions.

The currency bill reached the end of the first stage of its legislative career with its passage by the house. The measure was completed in detailed consideration, after three days of efforts to amend, and reached the final vote in the house today.

Passed by the house, where a lengthy consideration before the banking committee awaits it. It probably will be some weeks before the measure is reported to the senate, where further debate is expected to delay its final passage.

SENATE CONFIRMS PRESTON M'GOODWIN

Washington, Sept. 18.—Oklahoma was honored today by the confirmation by the senate of Preston McGoodwin to be minister to Venezuela, this diplomatic post being the most important federal position that ever was given to an Oklahoma democrat and which pays an annual salary of $10,000. McGoodwin had the united support of the Oklahoma congressional delegation. The confirmation came after a long fight made by political opponents.

One of the staunchest champions of McGoodwin at the executive session of the senate this afternoon was Senator Pomerene of Ohio, who as a member of the foreign relations committee investigated the charges preferred in Ohio, where Mr. McGoodwin was once employed. These Ohio charges, it is declared, were instigated by political enemies of McGoodwin in Oklahoma, who also made the welkin ring within state borders in an attempt to defeat the confirmation.

Among the other senators who vigorously championed McGoodwin were Senator Stone of Missouri, Senator Vardaman of Mississippi and Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia. Both the Oklahoma senators also lauded President Wilson's choice. Mr. McGoodwin was summoned to Washington several weeks ago by Secretary Bryan, it being desired that he hasten to his future post, Caracas, to handle the United States in interests during the rebellion instigated by Former President Castro. Charges that McGoodwin was a republican were filed from several points and his departure was delayed. After a thorough investigation on all sides, these were found to be absolutely groundless.

One kind of knocking that no one objects to is the knocking of hammers as new buildings go up. That sort of knocking is music in any town.

The candidacy of Judge R. L. Williams has brought forth a much heartier response from the press of the state than that of any one so far announced for that office. At this time he is undoubtedly the strongest man in the field.

Col. Sidney Sugg is having a hard time convincing people that he is really in earnest about being in the race to succeed Senator Gore. That is the penalty of having a reputation as a joker. That sort of reputation is about as hard to live down as any other.

The chances are that in impeaching Gov. Sulzer, Tammany has gone too far for its own good. Whether he is convicted or acquitted the people at large will look upon it as a punch game and at the next election the Tiger will likely yet his tail twisted good and proper by an indignant populace.

Miracles will never cease. The latest thing in that line is the advocacy by ex-Gov. Patterson of the enforcement of the prohibition laws of Tennessee, which have been so flagrantly violated from the time Patterson was governor on down to this good hour. Evidently there has been a break between Patterson and the whisky interests, and he is now trying to get revenge.

Every little while somebody raises a question about pensioning government employees. The country has about all the pension load it can carry already, and if a man cannot save enough from his salary to keep him in his old age he should keep out of government service. No one enticed him into it.

The News-Herald reports that the Pott. Co. fair, now in progress at Shawnee, is the largest and best attended ever held there. Pontotoc county should begin planning a similar enterprise for 1914. Nothing like beginning in time.

Maj. Chas. F. Barrett is once more in editorial harness. He is now associate editor of the Shawnee News-Herald, and is giving its readers some spicy editorials that never miss the mark they are aimed at. Maj. Barrett has always held the esteem of the press of Oklahoma, for he is a veteran in the profession.

TWO MEN AWAITING THEIR EXECUTION

Gainesville, Ga., Sept. 19.—James Cantrell and his younger brother Bartow Cantrell are occupying the "death cell" in the Gainesville jail and, unless some unforeseen and unexpected contingencies should arise that would cause the governor of the state to interfere with the execution of the sentence, the two prisoners will be executed, by hanging a week from today. The two Cantrells were tried several months ago and after having been found guilty of the murder of Arthur Hawkins, were sentenced to be hanged on September 26. Mrs. Sylvia Hawkins, the widow of the victim of the crime, who was tried for complicity in the crime, is now serving a life sentence for her share in the brutal murder.

The history of the crime which, at the time, created a great sensation and tremendous indignation throughout the state, clearly reflects the passionate and wanton nature of the woman in the case and the power which she exercised over James Cantrell, her lover, and Bartow, the younger brother of James, who seemed to be equally devoted to the woman.

Arthur Hawkins, his wife and their four children lived in Gainesville, but in March of this year removed to a farm near Belton. Their neighbors were James Cantrell, a widower with two children, his mother and sisters and Bartow Cantrell, a young man of sixteen or seventeen years. Soon after the Hawkins family came into the neighborhood James Cantrell contracted the mumps and Mrs. Hawkins went to his house to see him.

Cantrell and Mrs. Hawkins became infatuated one with the other almost at the first meeting, and, it appeared from the evidence at the trial, within two weeks after their first meeting they were seen to kiss each other. They say each other nearly every day, and numerous letters passed between them, letters in which she called him her "sweet boy," told him she loved him and had no pleasure except in his company, that she thought more of him than of any other man in the world, and that she would rather give up her baby than him.

In her later letters she suggested to Cantrell that he kill "Arthur" and put his body on the railroad track. She said that in the event of his death they would get a lot of money and would be able to marry. In another letter Mrs. Hawkins said she would go with Cantrell and they would follow Arthur out to some secluded place where they could kill him and nobody would ever know of it. Then she would live with him and take care of his children.

Mrs. Hawkins, according to the testimony, purchased shells from a hardware store in Lula, and with Cantrell's aid unloaded the shot, melted them into a slug, and together loaded the gun with which Hawkins was killed. The murder itself was committed by young Bartow Cantrell, who seemed to be the willing slave of Mrs. Hawkins. Armed with a pistol and a shotgun, Bartow Cantrell stationed himself behind a barn and when Hawkins passed by, he fired the slug into him, causing his instant death.

The evidence further showed that James Cantrell, at the instance of Mrs. Hawkins, had tried to buy strychnine in a Gainesville drug store, with which to poison her husband, but the druggist refused to sell the poison.

While Mrs. Hawkins and the two Cantrells were prisoners in the Hall county jail a note was passed by Mrs. Hawkins to James in which she said she would "stick to them" and that they would never hang if they would "stick to her;" that while they were in trouble and might be sentenced, they would never be hanged. This was before the cases came to trial.

At the trial both James and his brother turned state's evidence against Mrs. Hawkins, and their mother and their sister corroborated their testimony which showed that Mrs. Hawkins had been the real instigator of the crime. In her own defense Mrs. Hawkins declared that she had nothing to do with the murder and that the Cantrells killed her husband because he had threatened to report them for making moonshine whiskey. The jury recommended mercy in her case.

After her conviction Mrs. Hawkins wanted to take her youngest child, about three years of age to prison with her, but the State Prison Commission would not permit this. Mrs. Hawkins is a handsome woman of about thirty years and had borne a good reputation up to the time of her infatuation for James Cantrell.

ANOTHER RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

There Is No Mystery In This Fact that season after season--year after year--our customers return to us for their clothes. It simply goes to prove,--first, that our customers are discriminating judges of value and second, that the clothes we sell in every way meet the standard that our customers set.

And here's why,--because we have learned where and how to select the merchandise we sell. We have found through years of experience that the lines we represent such as Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Michaels-Stern of Rochester, and Spero-Michaels of New York are better clothes at moderate prices and will look better and wear longer than any others.

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED TO INSPECT OUR NEW FALL MODELS. COME IN AND TRY THEM ON AND SEE HOW THEY FIT

To Honor Gov. Johnson's Memory.

St. Peter, Minn., Sept. 19.—Preparations are nearly complete for the unveiling next Sunday, of the monument of former Governor John A. Johnson, erected by public subscriptions of the citizens of St. Peter to honor the memory of one of their most honored fellow citizens. The day selected for the unveiling of the handsome statue is particularly appropriate because it will be the fourth anniversary of the death of Gov. Johnson.

Immediately after the death of Gov. Johnson his admirers in this city started a fund for the erection of a suitable memorial in his native town. The project was temporarily abandoned for awhile, owing to the statewide movement in favor of erecting a statue of the deceased on the grounds of the state capitol at St. Paul. After the memorial at St. Paul had been unveiled, however, the agitation here was resumed and it was not difficult to obtain the necessary funds. The statue which will grace the grounds of the court house, is a replica of the St. Paul monument.

NO PROTEST FILED AGAINST REFERING GAMBLING BILL

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 18.—Unless a protest is filed with the Secretary of State by midnight Wednesday, there can be no question raised about the referendum petitions filed on the anti-gambling and anti-pool-selling bills passed by the Fourth Legislature. State Senator Guy P. Horton of Altus, a joint author of both measures who was here yesterday, said he knew of no protest to be filed. Under such conditions the laws will not become operative until approved by the people at the first general election held in the state.

Have You School Supplies to Buy

Several reasons why you should buy the children's school supplies here—but the principal one is that our prices are considerably less than the nearest competition. Of course the individual savings are relatively small, yet collectively they are large, and if the supplies are bought here in a lump you will find the resulting saving well worth your while. Another "plus"—the quick service we are prepared to give you—plenty of clerks to help you select or to fill your orders, with speed and accuracy. It is easily the school supply shop of the town.

PART SECOND. CHAPTER IX.

The Road to Paradise.
On the 3rd of November Byram's American circus, traveling slowly overland toward the Spanish frontier, drew up for an hour's rest at Quimperle. I, however, as usual, prepared to ride forward to select a proper place for our encampment, and to procure the necessary license.

We were in seedy circumstances; an endless chain of bad luck had followed us from Chartres.

The fortune that Byram had made in the previous year was already gone; we no longer traveled by rail; we no longer slept at inns; we could barely pay for the food for our animals.

"Got enough cash for the license?" asked Byram, uneasily.

"Plenty, governor; don't worry," I replied, and set my horse at a gallop over the old stone bridge.

I passed a stone house, another; then the white road curved under the trees and I rode straight into the heart of Paradise, my horse's hoofs awaking echoes in the silent, stone-paved square.

A young girl with a face like the Madonna stole across the square in her felt shoes.

"Can you tell me where the mayor lives?" I asked, looking down at her from my horse.

"Ho! la; oui, monsieur, si l' faut bien. The mayor is at breakfast in his kitchen yonder."

"Thank you, my child."

I turned my horse across the shady square to a stone house banked up with bed on bed of scarlet geraniums. The windows were open; a fat man with very small eyes sat inside eating an omelet.

I told him that I wanted a license for a circus to camp for one night; that I also desired permission to pitch camp somewhere in the vicinity. He made out the license, stamped it, handed it to me, and I paid him the usual fee.

"How much will it cost to have your town-crier announce the coming of the circus?" I inquired.

"That will cost ten sous if he drums and reads the announcement from here to the chateau."

I gave the mayor ten copper pennies.

The mayor glanced at me.

"Paris still holds out?" he asked, with a yawn.

"Oh yes," I replied.

"And the war—is it still going badly for us?"

"There is always hope," I answered.

"Hope," he grumbled; "oh yes, we know what hope is—we of the coast live on it when there's no bread; but hope never yet filled my belly for me."

Why, not a keel has passed out of the port since August. Where is the fishing fleet? Where are the sardine sloops that ought to have sailed from Algiers? Where are the Icelanders?"

"Have the German cruisers frightened all your craft from the sea?" I asked, astonished.

"Yes, partly. Then there's an ugly French cruiser lying off Groix, yonder, and her black stacks are dribbling smoke all day and all night. We have

"I'll Cry Your Edicts and I'll Drum for You, Too!"

orders to keep off and use Lorient

when we want a port."

"You believe the cruiser out at sea yonder is going to bring you evil?"

"She has brought it. But it's all the same to me. I am mayor, and exempt, and I have elder and tobacco and boudin for a few months yet."

At that moment we both caught sight of a peasant running and waving a packet of blue papers in the air.

"Monsieur the mayor! Monsieur the mayor!" he called, while still far away.

"Cre cochon de malheur!" muttered the mayor, turning pale. "He's got a telegram!"

He turned to me, almost bursting with suppressed prophecy.

"It has come—the evil that the black cruiser brings us! You laughed! Tenez, monsieur; there's your bad luck in these blue morsels of paper!"

And he snatched the telegram from the breathless messenger, reading it with dilating eyes.

When at length the magistrate had mastered the contents of his telegram, he looked up with a stolid stare.

"I want my drummer. Where's the town-crier?" he demanded, as though dazed.

"He has gone to Lorient, m'sieu the mayor," ventured the messenger.

"To get drunk. I remember. Imbecile! Why did he go today? Are there not six other days in this cursed week? Who is there to drum? No body. Nobody knows how in Paradise. Seigneur, Dieu! the ignorance of this town!"

"M'sieu the mayor," ventured the messenger, "there's Jacqueline."

"Ho! Vrai. The Lizard's young one! She can drum, they say."

"The little witch can drum them awake in Ker-la," muttered the messenger.

The mayor rose, looked around the square, frowned. Then he raised his voice in a yell: "Jacqueline! Jacqueline! Thou Jacqueline!"

A far voice answered, faintly breaking across the square from the bridge: "She is on the rocks with her sea-rake!"

The mayor thrust the blue telegram into his pocket and waddled out of his garden, across the square, and up the path to the cliffs.

Uninvited, I went with him.

CHAPTER X.

The Town-Crier.

The bell in the unseen chapel ceased ringing as we came out on the cliffs of Paradise, where, on the horizon, the sun hung low, belted with a single ribbon of violet cloud.

Below the cliffs, on a crescent of flat sand, from which sluggish, rosy rivulets crawled seaward, a man stood looking out across the water. And the mayor stopped and called down to him: "Oho, the Lizard! I want somebody to drum and read a proclamation. Where's Jacqueline?"

At this instant a young girl, a mere child, appeared on the beach, dragging a sea-rake over the ground behind her. She was a lithe creature, bare-limbed and ragged, with the sea-tan on throat and knees. The girl caught sight of the mayor and gave him a laughing greeting which he returned with a shrug.

"If you want a town-crier," she called up, in a deliciously fresh voice, scarcely tinged with the accent, "I'll cry your edicts and I'll drum for you, too!"

The girl threw her rake into a boat and leaped upon the rocks at the base of the cliff.

"Jacqueline! Don't come up that way!" bawled the mayor, horrified.

"Hey! Robert! Oho! Lizard! Stop her or she'll break her neck!"

Breathless, hot, and laughing, the girl pulled herself up over the edge of the cliff. I held out my hand to aid her, but she pushed it away, crying, "Thank you all the same, but here I am."

The mayor looked at her angrily, but, probably remembering he was at her mercy, suppressed his wrath and held out the telegram. "Can you read that, my child?"

"Yes, I can read it. Why not? Can't you?"

"Read! I the mayor of Paradise!" repeated the outraged magistrate.

"What do you mean, Lizard of lizards! some cat!"

"Now if you are going to say such things I won't drum for you," said the child, glancing at me out of her sea-blue eyes and giving a shake to her salt-locks.

I gave her a hand-bill; at the first glance her eyes sparkled, the color deepened under her coat of amber tan; she caught her breath and read rapidly to the end.

"Oh, how beautiful," she said, softly. "Am I to read this in the square?"

"I will give you a franc to read it, Jacqueline."

"No, no—only—oh, do let me come in and see the heavenly wonders! Would you, monsieur? I—I cannot pay—but would—could you let me come in? I will read your notice, anyway," she added, with a quaver in her voice.

"Come whenever you like, Jacqueline," I said. "Ask for me at the gate."

"And who are you, monsieur?"

"My name is Scarlett."

"Scarlett," she whispered, as though naming a sacred thing.

The mayor, who had toddled some distance ahead of us, now halted in the square, looking back at us through the red evening light.

"Jacqueline, the drum is in my house. I'll lend you a pair of sabots too. Come, hasten little idler!"

We entered the mayor's garden where the flowers were glowing in the luster of the setting sun. The mayor soon reappeared with drum and drumsticks in one hand and a pair of sabots in the other. "Go, my child," he said and Jacqueline marched through the garden out into the square by the fountain, drumsticks clutched in one tanned fist, the scrolls of paper in the other.

In the center of the square she stood a moment, looking around, then raised the drumsticks; there came a click, a flash of metal, and the quiet square echoed with a startling outburst. All ready a knot of people had gathered around her; others came swiftly to windows and doorsteps; the loungers left their stone benches by the river the maids of Paradise flocked from the bridge. The drum-roll ceased.

"Attention! Men of Finistere! By order of the governor of Lorient, all men between the ages of twenty and forty, otherwise not exempt, are ordered to report at the navy yard barracks, war-port of Lorient, on the 5th of November of the present year, to join the army of the Loire."

"Bretons! France calls! Answer with your ancient battle-cry, 'Sainte Anne! Sainte Anne!' The eyes of the world are on Armoric! To arms!"

The girl's voice ceased; a dead silence reigned in the square. The men looked at one another stupidly; a woman began to whimper.

"The curse is on Paradise!" cried a hoarse voice.

The drummer was already drawing another paper from her ragged pocket and again in the same clear, emotionless voice, but slightly drawing her words, she read:

"To the people of Paradise! The manager of the famous American traveling circus, lately returned from a tour of the northern provinces, with camels, elephants, lions and a magnificent company of artists, announces a stupendous exhibition to be held in Lorient at greatly reduced prices, thus enabling the intelligent and appreciative people of Paradise to honor the Republic and to honor the benevolent and discerning patronage! Long live France! Long live the republic! Long live the circus!"

A resounding roll of the drum ended the announcements; the girl slung the drum over her shoulder, turned to the right, and passed over the stone bridge, sabots clinking.

The maids of Paradise were weeping now by the fountain; the men gathered near, and their slow, hushed voices scarcely rose above the ripple of the stream where Robert the Lizard fished in silence.

I walked across to the Quimperle road and met Jacqueline, dancing along with her drum. We stood in the middle of the high-road looking through the dust haze, she doubtless dreaming of the splendors to come, I very, very tired.

Suddenly, straight out of the flaming gates of the sunset, the miracle was wrought. Breathless, she shrank back among the weeds, one hand pressed to her throbbing throat. Then she caught sight of something through the dust that filled her with a delicious terror, and she cried out. For there, uptowering in the haze, came trudging a great, gray creature, a fearsome, swaying thing in crimson trappings, flapping huge ears. It shuffled past, swinging a dusty trunk; the sparkling horsemen cantered by, tin armor blaring in the fading glory; the chariots dragged after, and the closed dens of beasts rolled behind in single file, followed by the band-wagon, where heaven-inspired musicians played frantically and a white-faced clown balanced his hat on a stick and shrieked.

So the circus passed into Paradise; and I turned and followed in the wake of dust, stale odors, and clamorous discord, sick at heart of wandering over a world I had not found too kind. And at my heels stole Jacqueline.

CHAPTER XI.

In Camp.

We went into camp under the landward gleam of the cliffs, in a field of clover which was to be plowed under in a few days. We all were there except Kelly Eyre, who had gone to telegraph the governor of Lorient for permission to enter the port with the circus. Another messenger also left camp on private business for me.

Presently we were all sitting around the long camp-table in the glare of two smoky petroleum torches, eating our bread and ham and potatoes and drinking Breton cider, a jug of which Mr. Horak had purchased for a few coppers.

The first older observed Byram a little; he drew a doctored cigar from his pocket, lit it, and

Horray! Baby To Rule the House

No Longer Do Women Fear The Graces of All Human Blessings.

It's a joy and comfort to know that those much-talked-of pains and other distresses that are said to precede child-bearing may easily be avoided. No woman need fear the slightest discomfort if she will fortify herself with the well-known and time-honored remedy, "Mother's Friend."

This is a most grateful, penetrating, external application that at once softens and makes pliant the abdominal muscles and ligaments. They naturally expand without the slightest strain, and thus not only banish all tendency to nervous, twitching spells, but there is an entire freedom from nausea, discomfort, sleeplessness and dread that so often leave their impress upon the babe.

The occasion is therefore one of unbounded, joyful anticipation, and too much stress can not be laid upon the remarkable influence which a mother's happy, pre-natal disposition has upon the health and fortunes of the generation to come.

Mother's Friend is recommended only for the relief and comfort of expectant mothers, thousands of whom have used and recommended it. You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1.00 a bottle. when I considerably refused, he carefully set it alight with a splinter from the fire. Its odor was indescribable.

Byram appeared to have recovered something of his buoyancy and native optimism.

"Gentlemen," he said, "let's kinder saunter over to the inn and have a night-cap with Kelly Eyre."

The lighted door of the inn hung ajar as we crossed the star-lit square; Byram entered and stood a moment in the doorway, stroking his chin. "Bong joor the company!" he said, lifting his battered hat.

The few Bretons in the winerom returned his civility; he glanced about and his eye fell on Kelly Eyre, Speed's assistant balloonist, seated by the window with Horak.

"Well, gents," said Byram, hopefully, "an' what ails the prospects of smilin' fortune when rosy-fingered dawn has come again to kiss us back to life?"

"Rotten," said Eyre, pushing a telegram across the oak table.

Byram's face fell; he picked up the telegram and fumbled in his coat for his spectacles with unsteady hand.

"Let me read it, governor," said Speed, and took the blue paper from Byram's unresisting, stubby fingers.

"Oho!" he muttered, scanning the message; "well—well, it's not so bad as all that—"

"Well, sir?" said Byram, in a low voice.

"Well, governor? Oh—er—the telegram?" asked Speed, like a man fighting for time.

"Yes, the telegram," said Byram, patiently.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS AT STATE FAIR

The Young Men's Democratic league of Oklahoma county in special session at the city hall Thursday night made further plans for participating in democratic day, October 1, at the State Fair.

A communication was read from Chairman McComb of the democratic national central committee which informed the club that owing to the fact that he was still confined to his bed in a hospital it will be impossible for him to be in Oklahoma City as guest of the league Democratic day.

President John Myers was directed to communicate with other democrats of national reputation available as speakers for the occasion.

Communications received from Young Democratic leagues throughout the state indicate that 2,000 young democrats will be present at the fair on Democratic day.

Caps have been ordered for Oklahoma county members of the league who will participate in the parade of clubs.

Among the out-of-town visitors present Thursday night were Roscoe Cox, chairman of the leagues of the Fourth congressional district, and E. F. Foster of Drumright, Okla.

NORMAL NOTES

The courses in the extension work are almost ready for distribution. The courses in American literature, psychology, and general history will be mailed to those enrolled toward the last of the week.

Quite a spirited debate on the "Recall of Judges" was held today in the advance American history class. It might be added that they were not recalled.

The work on the gymnasium is again being pushed forward after several weeks delay.

The band expects to begin regular practice next week. A fine band was developed and great work is expected to be done this year.

The athletic association will hold a meeting at the chapel hour tomorrow.

The preliminary reading contest to decide who shall represent East Central in the Eastside triangular contest will be held Oct. 10. Quite a number of young ladies have entered the contest and the race for the honors is to be lively.

The foot ball field is marked off and the goal posts are up, and before long the practice will take the shape of a real game each day between the Varsity and the Scrubs. Over two full teams are reporting for practice each day.

MAY CALL ELECTION FOR NEW COUNTY

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 18.—If Payne County will have 15,000 or more population after losing a part of its territory Gov. Cruce will call an election for creation of the new county of Shafter. The new county, of which Cushing would be the county seat, is to be composed of parts of Creek, Lincoln and Payne, and at a hearing before the governor today each of the three counties protested that to relieve them of area for the new county would leave them short in both taxable area and population, the minimum requirement for the latter being 15,000. Gov. Cruce said all objections had been met by the new county advocates save the population of Payne County, and announced if that county would provide the expense money he would have a census taken. Payne County has until Monday to answer, otherwise the proclamation will be issued.

SULZER IMPEACHMENT TRIAL UNDER WAY

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 18.—William Sulzer, Governor of New York, charged by the Assembly with high crimes and misdemeanors, failed to appear in person today before the High court of impeachment when it convened to begin the trial which will determine his guilt or innocence. Instead, his attorney "entered a special appearance" in the governor's behalf and challenged the organization of the court and its jurisdiction over the accused.

The objections of counsel were swept aside temporarily by Chief Judge Edgar M. Cullen of the Court of Appeals, presiding, and the impeachment tribunal proceeded to organize.

The court convened at noon and adjourned an hour later until tomorrow to permit a committee of three to prepare and report rules of procedure. No objection was interposed to a ruling of Chief Judge Cullen that the three designated Judges of the Court of Appeals, Judges Miller, Chase and Hiscock, be permitted to sit with the elective Judges as members of the high court.

MUSKOGEE REUNION COMES TO CLOSE

Muskogee, Ok., Sept. 18.—Three hundred veterans of the Confederate ranks, many of them accompanied by their wives, marched through the business streets of Muskogee this morning in the big parade which closed the 1913 state reunion of the Oklahoma division of United Confederate Veterans. In addition to the long line of veterans, marching two abreast, the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy were also in line. Although the day was warm, the veterans kept time to the strains of "Dixie" with apparent enjoyment and not a prostration was reported. The last business session of the reunion was held this morning and the veterans adjourned at 10 o'clock for the parade. The matter of a reunion city for 1914 was left to Commander D. M. Hailley. All the veterans had left for their homes tonight.

W. F. Gilmer of Oklahoma City was elected division commander of the Sons of Veterans at the final session of that organization. He will appoint the seven brigade commanders. They also elected a committee to protest against the adoption of unfair histories by the state educational authorities.

Indiana Labor Men to Meet

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 19.—Delegates from the various labor organizations in all parts of the state are beginning to arrive here and the arrangements are nearly completed for the annual convention of the Indiana State Federation of Labor which will open here on Sunday to remain in session four days. Many noted labor leaders from Indiana and other states are expected to attend the convention and a large attendance is expected. The state organizations of the Bartenders' League, the Retail Clerk's Protective Association and the Machinists' Union will hold their annual conventions here at the same time.
